Her guiding lines are, "One day we are all going to be a memory....we must truly try to be a good one. The smiles on the faces of my students, as they express their love and trust, encourage me to work for them and give purpose to my life. I am driven by their faith and love. Their never-ending support pushes me further and allows me to be me. I keep reminding myself to be a learner and seek means and ways to enrich myself."

I am forever inspired by the lines:

"Life is short, break the rules, forgive quickly, kiss slowly, love truly, laugh uncontrollably, and never regret anything that made you smile."

Twenty years from now you will be more disappointed by the things you didn't do than by the ones you did. So throw off the bowlines. Sail away from the safe harbor. Catch the trade winds in your sails... Explore. Dream. Discover....."

Encourage formulation of good habits

I strongly believe that if a child is not able to propose turn taking in a play scenario, then 'set the stage for him / her to learn about turn taking and giving to others. We can encourage such experiences where children take turns on toys and thus develop sharing. 'Vygotsky proposed that adults and peers provide assistance or scaffolding to help a child reach the level of independent performance.'

Crafted situations where the children need to understand the importance of waiting for their turn can have positive implications on the child's thought process. Therefore, the facilitator must carefully endorse turn taking in going to the toilet or washing their hands and so on. Research indicates that children's development is strongly influenced by the adult assistance. Concrete information is very crucial, children should be given concrete information about when their turn will be. For instance, when a child is waiting in front of the screen / slide he / she should be clearly made to understand that his / her position is five. This means that his turn will be after four kids.

Activity :(Sink and Float)

The concept of Float and sink was explained by making a paper boat and children experimented it by using different objects by dropping it in water to see what all objects sink and float. Through this activity children were able to identify that if an object is heavier than water it will sink and if it is lighter than water it will float..

TEACHER'S CORNER...

How teachers spend their Holidays

Holidays are the days when an individual takes off from their usual work. It has been no different for the teachers who untiringly devote their lives to inculcate values in their students along with giving them lessons from the academic curriculum.

A teacher has a responsibility of leading an exemplary life as the students follow their teacher as their role models. Holidays give the teachers time to have some 'me' time as they are always surrounded by the students and their issues in School. This is the time which they use to relax their body and mind a much-needed respite from the monotony of their daily works. The concepts of nuclear families have led some teachers to visit their hometowns, relatives, parents and spend time with them. There are others who would just sit home, spend time with their family and spend their holidays.

Over the years, the concept of national as well as international travel has increased manifolds. People travel to visit and explore new places, historical monuments, beaches, snow-capped mountains, lush green places and water bodies. The teachers are no different to this. In fact, this gives the teachers a new outlook to life, soothes their inquisitiveness through exposure to the places that they have studied and now teach. Such visits boost the confidence of a teacher and teaching becomes fun.

While still there are others who would prefer to sit home, read a book, watch movies, take up their kids and teach them their lessons. The preferences of teachers might be different but the idea of holidaying has been that of relaxation, rejuvenation, exposure, learning and coming back to their educational institution with a new energy to give their pupils a new learning using innovative ideas.
